Paris, Oct. 6. Mr Paul G. Hoffman, the outgoing Marshall Plan Administrator, said today that Western Europe could increase its gross national output by more than 60 percent in 10 years if it tried.

In his farewell speech to the Organisation for European Economic Co-operation. Mr Hoffman said: "Some people have said that we have a choice of guns or bread. I say no, we can have both guns and bread if we work together even more closely in the months that lie ahead than we have in the past. "We shall have time to win this peace."

Mr Hoffman sald: "In Wes-thave got to wage it on all the tern Europe you have 270 mil- fronts-millary, economic, polilion hard-working and re- tieal, informational and psychosourceful peoples But your logical. gross national product last year. The Finance Ministers, com-Avas only $100,000 million

TORITAIN'S attitude to China reflects

D but a part of her foreign policy.

Nevertheless it is a vital part, and, consequently, anything that a responsible Minister of the Crown says which is associated with China must be given full value. The weightiest voice in the British Cabinet on foreign policy and affairs is that of Mr Ernest Bevin, and because of this his speech to the delegates of the Labour Party demands | close attention.

Three aspects of this speech are arresting: (I) the vigour and forthrightness with which he inckled the subject of international relations; (2) the consistency and continuity of the government's policy in foreign affairs; (3) the realism of his approach to the multiple problems connected with maintaining the peace and prosperity of the world. China, and her new professedly Communist government could be seen reflected in all three of these features of Mr Bevin's foreign policy speech at Margate. The Foreign Minister, with becoming realism, declared his support for the admission of the new China into the United Nations because, to withhold it, would certainly encourage a dismal state of affairs-an entitled Chinese regime embittered by obstruction and, as a result, only too willing to become a satellite voice instead of 'n_willing and free member of the comity of nations. Nevertheless, Mr Bevin, clearly speaking for British government, made it clear that sponsorship of the Peking regime for admission to the United Nations did not mean that the new China had carte blanche to become a ghost voice for Soviet Russia in the councils. On the contrary, the British Foreign Minister reposes his falth in the traditional patience and diplomatic acumen of the Chinese to a point where.

he foresces the new China "linding herself associated with the Democracles in trying to build a new world." Here can be seen an interesting compromise-founded on consistent moral motives. Mr Bevin's gesture of friendship to Mao Tse-tung is not to be considered as an advocacy of the obstructive and destructive principles of international Communism as preached and advanced by Soviet Russia, but as an opportunity for Chinn, "a great nation" as Mr Bevin describes her, to make a positive contribution to the lasting peace of the world through her association with the United Nations. Mr Bevin extended not only an invitation, but a challenge to the new China. The invitation is to become a useful member of the peace-loving world; the challenge, to adapt her professed Communistic doctrine in such a way as to prove her right to membership of an organisation committed to the task, among other things, of maintaining international concord; respect of the rights of member nations; the economic, educational and cultural advancement of backward countries, and the renouncement of military and political designs on smaller nations. The Peking government would be living in a Fool's Paradiso if it gained the impression from Bevin's speech that Britain was prepared to support its admission to the United Nations without prior acknowledgment of the solemn obligations which membership of UN involves. Britain's attitude and policy towards China is clearly not one of expediency but of honest conviction that the new China can, if its leaders care to exert themselves, play/a proper and notable part in resolving the international problems of the day. But this contribution can come only from sound and well proved democratic principles of international relations and understanding.

A weekly series of talks is now being prented by Radio Hongkong entitled "The Animal orld." The second talk in the series, on the air om 10.10 p.m. on Tuesday, is sub-titled "How ey find their way about." The entire series quires into what is known, and scientifically toved, of the manner in which various animals thave and how the world strikes them.

The greater part of the research that conibuted to this programme has taken place ithin the past 50 years, and most of it very ecently. The knowledge gained was summarised nder the guidance of Professor S. Zuckerman, B, FRS, of the Department of Anatomy of the niversity of Birmingham, and the scripts were ritten by Patrick Impey in consultation with ther members of the Department.

On Wednesday, at 9.40 p.m. there will be the ret in a series of British Council broadcasts, to be eld fortnightly.

. A SEAT IN THE STALLS . . .

"DeMille, who loves to unite romance and religion on the screen, has found the perfect plot in the story of Samson and Dellah. In full measure and overflowing, the story is in Chapters 13 to 16 of the Book of Judges, so full of hate, passion, frailty, treachery, murder and violence that even Biblical scholars have been said to question its place in the Holy Book.

"But the story is there and DeMille has taken full advantage of it, with enthusiasm.....

So have the Lee and in the world.

The paragraphs that supply is rolled up. the lead to this review are taken from Paramount Pictures' advance publicity on this epic of a fabulously strong Israelite in the memory of those who see who fell to the wiles of a it for anything else, the logical

Epic pains

DeMille took pains with this story, one of the few that he asks audiences not to miss. It is in Technicolour and the settings are as gaudy as generations of illustrators of Bible stories for children have associated with how the Israelite and Philistine world lived. Yet neither Mature, nor. the Holy Land.

Weissmaller, who could have done just as well by Samson and is more experienced at fighting lions, fit into the pattern. For the role of Samson, the genial Victor is rather the genial Victor is rather magnificent and whatever other nature where the effect on man adjectives the trailers may $3.50 of passing centuries goes. No think up. 2.40 still looks a typical New York boy one would sooner expect to meet in the Bronx or

In one respect Mature fits into the role. He looks as much the riddle-offering smart aleck as the Book of Judges makes Samson out to be.

That Samson could have fallen into a profound desire for Delilah seems logical enough when one views that which is more beautiful than the moon material supplied through over Zorah or the starlit waters of the Jordan—Hedy Lamarr. It is a debatable point that Pictures: the original Delilah looked anything like this beauty from Vienna, Had DeMille been recking genuine histrionic talent to do well by Delilah, he could have given Bette Davis over to the make-up men and they could have turned out a raven-haired example of Philistine attraction that would, perhaps, have not been as fresh a breeze wafted from Hebron but would have left one more

Lamarr, at her most dramatic. which is even worse than the American accent of the Philiston The choice of Mature is a blue, a minute way Mr has been dissipated in too I guarantee that these thrillers wanderings off into other cessful without any star indevelops a Viennese accent also open to criticism. One could associate with the Biblical Samson a more dour personality. After all there is no suggestion that Samson was anywhere in the nature of a Goliath. Nor is there one that he was a gym-trained health

Rock thrower.

One can even accept him as rather small in stature, teughened from throwing rocks at passing wolves that snarled at his sheep. It is not impossible to imagine Edward G. Robinson, could the make-up department make him look sufficiently young to be on his way to claim a Philistine bride, in the role. There is a suggestion in Judges that Samson was still young when he performed his feats of strength and havoc, The question is - would Robinson and Davis, who could have made a much better dramatic job of the story, draw the same crowds that are packing the Lee and Liberty Theatres? Old Man DeMille is a much smarter picture-moker than to have taken such a risk. With Robinson and Davis he may have drawn appreciative ploudits from critics in the sophisticated little magazines. With Mature and Lamarr he draws in the shekels.

Illustrations . . .

It's even said that future editions of Bible stories for children will have the Somson and Dolllah chaper illustrated by Mr DeMitte's permissionfrom this vehicle of vehicles for Mature and Lamarr, this most spectacular and terrific, coloscal film epic out of the Book of

One has to admit that DeMille can really turn out a scene that is colossal, supendous, terrific. astounding, and whatever other words a trailer has ever claimed for a film.

The scene in which Samson pulls down the temple of Dagon is built up with the hand of a master epic-weaver. It may be said that DeMille rather hurried over the rest of the film. It is patchy enough though an attempt is made to make Samson's slory and his attraction for Delilah more logical than the Book of Judges makes

It is after Samson is blinded and the picture starts on its last half-hour that the DeMille genius becomes truly discernible.

The climax is slowly built up Liberty Theatres which are and not an effect is missed, not being booked full for the a scene wasted. The festivities before the sacrifice in all their evening performances by barbaric splendour are minutely early afternoon for this outlined. Everything garish latest of DeMille's epics and spectacular that could be from the best-selling book confirmed by archaeological evidence or built up out of DeMille's fruitful imagination

THE PARTY OF THE P

Logical enough

If the picture will not remain fabulously beautiful Philistine, manner in which the temple is pulled down ever will. Not a scene that could have accompanied such a man-made cataclysm is missed and the comeras rest lovingly on the.

Cinderella (KING'8) is Walt Disney's contribution to r week-end of unusual films, Tt is one of Diency's best efforts if not his very best. He emerges! finally with "Cinderella" as a man who adds to fairy tales, remodels them and makes them more memorable.

He improves on the story we knew as children, adds to it characters who will remain as vivid as any of the originals and] will, with the children who see the film, be ever associated with Cinderella and her story.

The comedy situations are memorable, especially that to n forgetful old indy, neglects to bring along her magic wand.

A dictionary of fragrance

A FEW QUOTES from the dictionary of fragrances:

BERGAMOT: Porfume yielding, non-edible pear shaped citrus fruit grown in Sicily. Fresh, swent scent obtained from the rind of the fruit. Important in colognes and per-CARNATION: Cultivated in the south of France, Oll extracted with volatile solvents. Clove-like scent easily duplicated through synthetics. Oils of black pepper or pimento also used to reproduce the carnation odour.

CHYPRE: In French the island of Cyprus is called Chypre. The name first given to a perfume in the fourteenth century. Today's versions vary, but at least two dozen ingredients go into this fragrance, generally of a heavy, clinging type. Basic ingredients include patcheull, oakmoss vertivert and santal. FERN: Odeur suggests onkmoss and patchoull. GARDENIA: Heavy.... rarely if ever contains nutural oil of gardenia. Based on blends of other flower oils and synthetics. HELIOTROFE: .. Natural perfume of the flower is rarely used. Most heliotrope perfumes are based on synthetics, two of the important being heliotropin and vanillin. HYACINTH: Only small amounts of natural perfume are available....the finest perfumes combine natural flower oils and synthetics.

JASMIN: One of the most cherished fragrances in the perfume world, Jasmin oil cannot be exactly reproduced synthetically. It is extracted from the flower, but a jasmin perfume requires the utmost artistry, a complex formula.

LAVENDER: Member of the mint family. Most used in perfumery is grown in the south of France, However, English grown lavender is sought after for its superb fragrance.

LILAC: Very expensive to produce even small quantities of the real oils. Many of today's linefragrances are a combination of synthelics plus a certain amount of ylang ylang, jasmin, etc. LILY OF THE VALLEY: Higher priced fragrances use some real lily of the valley or jasmin oil. Rose oll, too, is of utmost importance as are the oils of the ylong ylang and orange blossoms. Synthetics widely used, also, .NEW MOWN HAY: Perfumes of this type have an extremely fresh odour, with a suggestion of clover, fern and even lavender.

ORANGE BLOSSOM: Blossoms from both sweet and bitter orange trees are used in perfumery, although finer aroma is obtained from blossoms of the latter. ORRIS ROOT: Oll is extracted from the root of the iris plant. Fragrance resembles violets. ROSE: There is some rose oll in most fine perfumes, frequently in such small quantity few noses can detect it. It gives depth and richness wherever t appears, VANILLA: Member of the orchict family. Vanillin, important in perfume and sachets, is found in the beans of the plant. Often synthetics are used.

VIOLET: Actual oil of violet is very costly. Finest violet perfumes are created with a tiny amount of real violet oil; synthetics and other fragances.

FURNISHING The NURSERY

TT'S all very nice, to talk about special nursery furniture and all. But what happens when the budget is limited, the space equally so, and the quarters temporary? Well, if there is one room in the house that can take gracefully and well to discarded pieces and simple, quite inexpensive accessories, that room is the nursery. And doing over all pieces, integrating them into one nice, harmonious group is fun, and a project in which both parents-to-be can share.

When the hand was played in recent team-of-four match, the bidding was the same at both tables, and in each case the opening lead was the eight of hearts. In each case the queen of hearts was put up. East covered with the king, and South won with the ace. Each declarer then drew three rounds of trumps. At this point, however, they parted company.

In the first room, the clarer made a bee line for the !! clubs. He could see that he was bound to lose a heart and a dlamond, and that the contract therefore depended on losing only one club. His plan was to play East for a singleton or doubleton ace of clubs. Retherefore led a low club from the dummy. When East played low, South put up the gucen, and West won with the acc. CHANGES IN THE ENGLAND TEAM UNLIKELY UPSET SIDE'S BALANCE

London, Oct. 6.

Two changes made in England's football team since it was first selected do not appear likely to upset the balance of the side when it opens the season's international programme tomorrow by meeting Ireland in Belfast.

Aston, of Manchester United, takes over the left-back position from Eckersley, of Blackburn, who is unfit and Langton, of Bolton, will be on the left wing for Finney, of Preston, who has an ankle injury.

While England may not repeat their nine-goals to two win at Manchester last year they are nevertheless expected to open the programme with a win. Most of the team took part in the World Cup Games in which England did not shine and there are those who believe that some of the men are lucky to get another chance after the failures of the Rio de Janeiro tour.

Ireland do not appear to from English Lengue sides, but have a side which is any great the forwards are likely to find improvement on the eleven England's defence too stendy, which crashed in the game of RISKY PATTERNS one Irish official as the worst due to an attack which tries too SOME last senson—then described by team in 30 years—but the much pattern-weaving as opfact that they are playing at posed to direct methods, for this home may be an asset towards any improved display.

WORKERS STAND UP DEMOCRACY PLAIN

Vienna, Oct. 6. The Minister of the Interior, Herr Oskar Helmer, today blamed "Cominform agents" for organising the strike in Austria which ended suddenly last night.

The Government issued a declaration thanking the people for "defending their country by their courageous attitude and proving to the world that Austria will never become a People's Democracy'."
